Part 3:

Aesthetic Ideas

Mohsin Khan: We decided to go to campus for our main picture. I suggested that we take pictures of the York Subway Station due to its futuristic appearance. Aesthetically we could change it to look like something out of a dystopian movie where this station is the hideout in a run down civilization. We could also go toward a more sci-fi look too, where instead of it being run down, it is something straight out of a Star- Wars movie.

Luca lamundo: The York university campus is the main focal point of our project. Some ideas I think would be good additions are, perhaps an environment similar to that of the "Blade Runner" movies. Set in a future point in time, for example what the York university campus would look like in 2040. A neon aesthetic or attributes that one would normally not expect to be on a university campus would be great additions.

Bennett Turnbull: With the futuristic look of the York University Subway Station we could go in multiple directions. If we decided to go in a more dystopian direction we could choose to make the world seem monotone. Likewise, if we wish to go in a sci-fi direction we may want very vibrant colours to make everything stand out.

Kyle Sweeney: We can go and take photos of either the subway or the modern buildings and would kind of do a Back to the Future when they travelled to 2015. We could also do a Star Wars thing as well

Saneeah Khalid: The futuristic/dystopian theme is one we have all agreed upon overall. York University's campus has many buildings and art that can be shaped to fit our idea. Another theme I suggest, would be a apocalypse trope. Kind of like "The world is ending", maybe adding some zombies into it. There are many areas around our campus with an older look which would work perfectly with our theme as well.
